

Pop music»
Elin Palmer's solo muse
calls her to Nashville »6D

LifeSTYLE

Ostrow on TV: Get the full Monty with "Python-a-thon" »12D Theater: "The Sunset Limited," "Grease" » 6D, 12D

BornFit >

When Colorado natives Lisa Welch and Julie Hill couldn't find clothes to match their active lifestyles during their pregnancies, they created their own line of tops, shorts, pants, skirts and jackets to wear while they ran, practiced yoga and played tennis. The popularity of BornFit led to their creating a line of "relaxed fit" styles for non-pregnant women.

Photo by Kit Williams

Emerging talent.
Ten fashion labels are tailoring a following and building the Rocky Mountains' reputation for style innovation.

By Suzanne S. Brown The Denver Post

The fashion industry in Colorado once was mostly about snow and cycling gear. Not anymore.

From fine jewelry and upscale kids clothes to custom handcrafted leather bags and organic cotton shirts, the range of fashion products and companies has grown. Many of the companies are small and home-based; others employ dozens and sell abroad, as well as domestically.

Ten such labels and two retailers will be recognized Oct. 23 when Fashion Group International of Denver hosts its biannual Rising Star salute to designers that have been in business five years or less.

While none of these Colorado labels threatens to knock Marc Jacobs or Donna Karan off their fashion pedestals, they're earning a following, even in a tough economy.

They're doing it through careful targeting of their market and by using a variety of means to reach their customers, including online sales and trunk shows,

Designs on Colorado

A DVLP

Rustin Coburn and Noah Price have taken DVLP from a Durango firm creating original artwork T-shirts to a Denver-based company that sells its collections for men, women and children across the country and in Canada and Europe.

Photo by Don Hales

LamanBlu >

After spending years creating women's and kids' clothing for such retailers as Nordstrom, Holli Gibson followed her passion and began designing an upscale children's wear collection. Photo by Erik Sear sponsoring athletes, and using blogging and social-networking sites such as Facebook and Twitter.

"I've been really surprised at the innovativeness of the design field here in Colorado," says Elaine Mariner, executive director of the Colorado Council of the Arts, a division of the state's economic development office. She was a judge in the Rising Star competition.

STARS » 3D

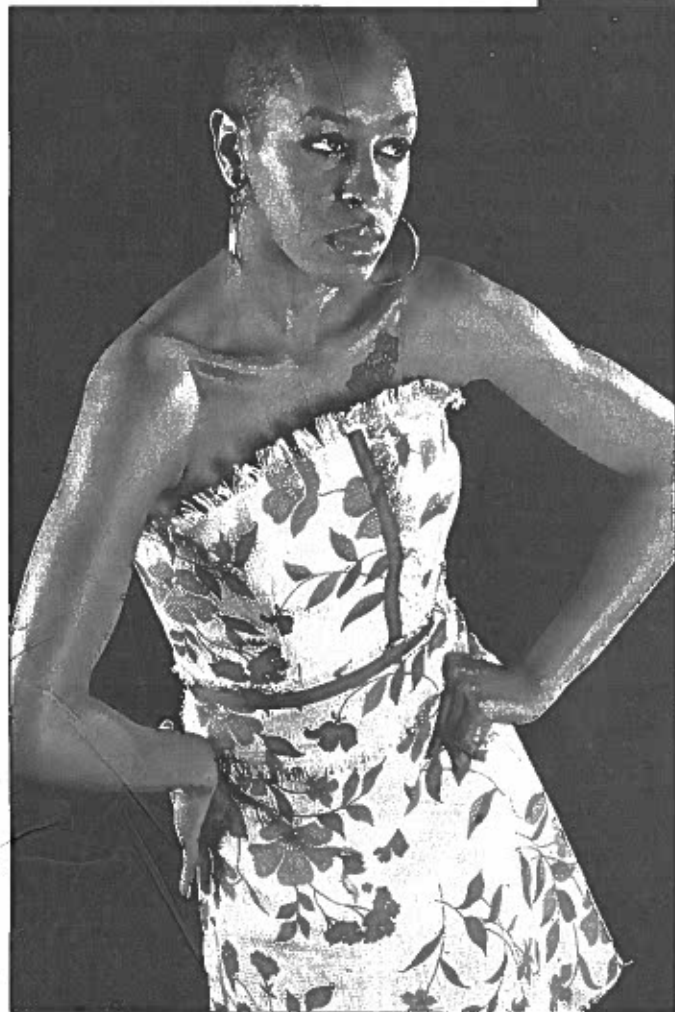

More inside The diversity of Colorado design is represented in the 2009 Rising Star Awards, Page 3D. Above: Eulanda Sanders' Shibori-felted recycled wool scarf.

Denver Couture >

A true couture creation, in Paris or Denver, is custom made and hand-stitched, and that's the case with Maureen de Haan's made-to-measure blue jeans and equestrian-inspired handbags. The bags are in leather, haircalf and canvas and feature bridle-bit hardware and trigger snaps.

Photo by Brent Ward

< Smooch

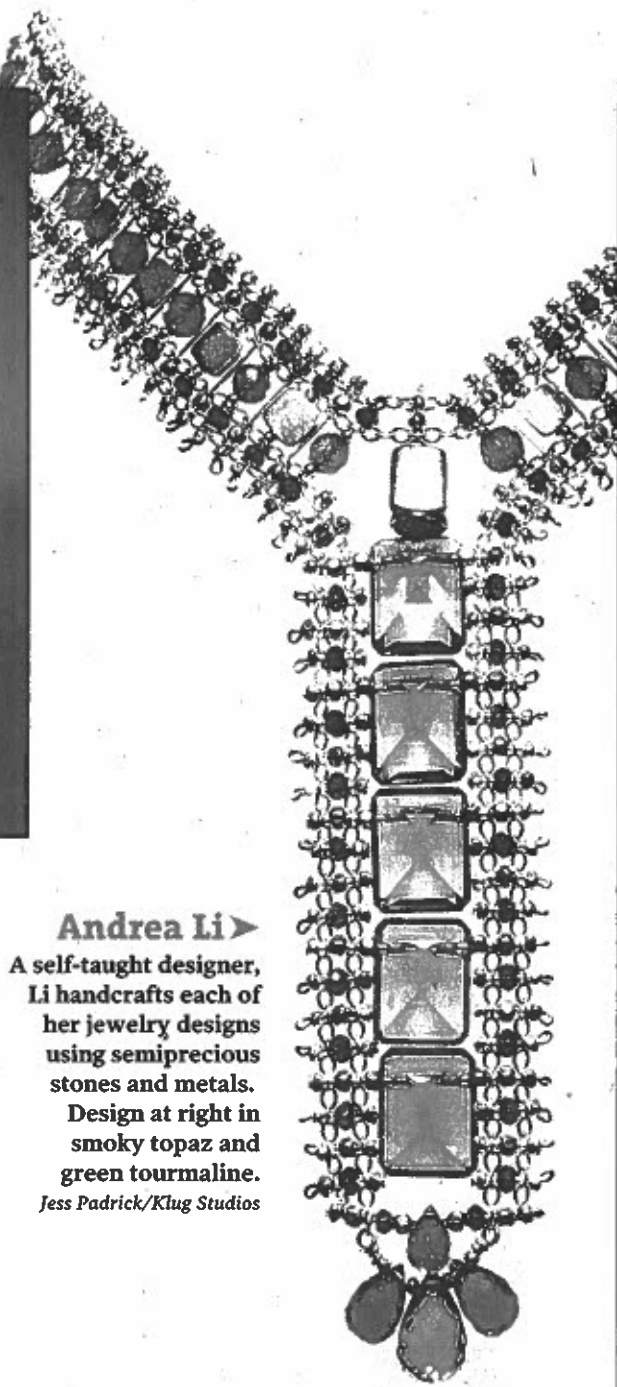

Stephanie Ohnmacht has participated in a number of Denver design competitions, earning a following for her girly dresses and feminine coats. This style was from her spring line.

Photo by Upstreamimaging.com; Model: Ferren Gipson

Andrea Li >

A self-taught designer, Li handcrafts each of her jewelry designs using semiprecious stones and metals. Design at right in smoky topaz and green tourmaline.

Jess Padrick/Klug Studios

Rising Star Awards

The Rising Star Awards, presented by Fashion Group International of Denver, will be held from 6-10 p.m. Oct. 23 at Mercedes-Benz of Westminster, 10391 Westminster Blvd. A reception and silent auction will be followed by an awards program and fashion show. Tickets start at $50 for general admission ($25 for students). Proceeds will be used for fashion-student scholarships and educational outreach programs. Reservations at blacktie-colorado.com/rsvp, event code: risingstar or call 720-341-9896.

A dozen to watch

Designs from the following individuals and companies will be shown on the runway at the Rising Star Awards, and one company will be chosen as the 2009 Rising Star:

- Art wearable: Susan Kiely, SK Designs, Women With a Cause; women-withacause.com
- Jewelry: Andrea Li, andreali.com
- Dresses: Stephanie Ohnmacht, Smooch; smoochstyle.com
- Women's sportswear: Lisa Welch and Julie Hill, BornFit; livebornfit.com
- Custom design: Maureen de Haan, Denver Couture; denvercouture.com
- Outdoor/activewear: Phoebe Stapleton, Sierra Designs; sierradesigns.com
- Urban/streetwear: Rustin Coburn and Noah Price, DVLP Clothing; developclothing.com
- Children's wear: Hollie Gibson, LamanBlu; lamanblu.com
- Accessories: Eulanda Sanders, Yo-San Studio; yosanstudio.com
- Men's Wear: Josh Holleb and Jesse Sapir, Totem Industries; totemindustries.com
- Retail Winner: Mona Lucero, monalucero.com
- Interior Design Winner: Jeanne Connolly, Vintage Renewal; vintagerenewal.com

STARS:
Labels stay in state for the lifestyle

<< FROM 1D

"There's a unique aesthetic that merges the Western theme with what's hip and trendy. Colorado has a high concentration of creative occupations, and that's extending to fashion design."

Another judge, Jim Stevens, owner of The Garment District, was impressed with the variety of fashion companies starting up. "Some seem to be thoroughly at the top of their game on how to bring their goods to market. They're thinking through the reaction retailers might have to them selling online, for example."

The emergence of a fashion community locally has followed expansion of the music and art worlds, says Carol Engel-Enright, who coordinated selection of the award honorees. "Companies are targeting niches and finding an audience," she says, whether they're focusing on pregnant women who want to keep doing yoga and other exercises, as Born Fit is doing, or skaters and snowboarders who want individualistic urban wear like the styles produced by DVLP clothing brand. Engel-Enright

BOETTCHER MANSION
Fall Bridal Affair
Sunday, October 18th, 11am to 3pm, Free to the Public
Murder Mystery Dinner
Friday, October 30th, 6:30 to 10pm
720-497-7650
900 Colorow Road, Golden CO (Lookout Mountain)
www.jeffco.us/boettcher

THE WOMEN'S FOUNDATION OF COLORADO

THINK BIG. BE BOLD. MAKE CHANGE.

2009 Denver Luncheon
featuring
Lisa Ling
National Geographic correspondent and Oprah Show contributor

Thursday, November 12, 2009
11:45 a.m. - 1:15 p.m.

THE DENVER POST
we are colorado
www.denverpost.com

INVITES YOU AND A GUEST TO A SPECIAL ADVANCE SCREENING OF

MEET DARREN, HE'S SIXTEEN GOING ON IMMORTAL.

THE VAMPIRE'S ASSISTANT
THE FRIEND OF THE YEAR

SCREENING WILL BE HELD ON TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20 AT 7PM.

PLEASE STOP BY
BabySitters Nightmare
619 E. 13th Ave.
Denver, CO 80203

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15 FROM 1 PM TO 3 PM TO PICK UP A COMPLIMENTARY PASS FOR TWO. ONE PASS PER PERSON. WHILE LIMITED SUPPLIES LAST. THEATER IS OVERBOOKED TO ENSURE A FULL HOUSE.

THIS FILM IS RATED PG-13 FOR SOME DRUG USE, INTENSE THEMATIC ELEMENTS, VIOLENCE AND ACTION, DISTURBING IMAGES, THEMATIC ELEMENTS AND SOME LANGUAGE.

IN THEATERS OCTOBER 23

The perfect home shopping network.

From new homes and resale to rentals and home improvement, with a full weekend of coverage. Real Estate in